A SPECIMEN OF ENGLISH POLITICS.

From the London Morning Post.

TO THE PRINCE OF WALES.

S I R,

WHILE your irregularities were confined within the circle of juvenile indiscretion, and your conduct could be accounted for in the natural progress of the passions, your excesses, numerous as they have been, excited indeed our wonder, but never provoked our indignation. We beheld you emerge from the nursery with even paternal affection; every heart was devoted to your interest; and it was neither difficult nor unworthy of you to have preserved those prejudices which had been generously formed in your favor. The intemperance of your youth gave no offence; and in the commencement of your career, it was never once suspected that we should have occasion to execrate the object whom we adored.

Such, Sir, were the advantages under which you entered into society; and give me leave to inform you, that you must have been extremely indefatigable, to have effaced so effectually those favorable impressions, and to have changed the current of opinion against you in so short a time. To your imprudent choice of friends may be attributed your present situation. It was your misfortune to select those for your companions, who, having neither fortune nor character to lose, were ready to conduct you into all the extravagancies of the meanest and most dangerous debaucheries. Their profligacy rendered them the willing panders of your pleasures, while their poverty involved you in their profusions and necessities. The nation feels the consequences of these complicated evils, and beholds, with equal astonishment and indignation, a progress uncommonly rapid from bad to worse, and which must eventually terminate in serious mischief to yourself and your country.

It must have been no less mortifying to your Royal Father, than disgraceful to yourself, that the first public act of your life was distinguished by an indecent opposition to his Government, and the constitutional rights of his Crown. It would be difficult to account for the motives of so decided and so extraordinary a conduct, if the party with whom you have condescended to associate, had not revealed the conditions of your contract with Mr. Fox. The engagements on your part have been executed with the most active and pointed fidelity—with a firmness which has triumphed over every obligation of filial duty and respect, and rendered you as inflexible to the general interests of your fellow citizens as the faction whom you patronize are destitute of every principle and honour. I will pass over the moral turpitude of irritating a son against a father;—the infamy of the action will fall on the incendiary.

It is more the object of this Address to expose the fallacy of the Right Honourable Gentleman, than to reprehend or amend him. Long habits have rendered him incorrigible; and admonition becomes useless where there is neither shame nor sentiment to give it force. He has promised "to pay off your debts, and increase your income," and for this valuable consideration you have been seduced to take a decided part against your Sovereign—to exert your influence against his prerogative—and to fly in the face of the whole kingdom. Is it possible, Sir, that those who have had the important charge of your education, could have concealed from your knowledge the form and spirit of the Constitution?—Is it necessary to inform you, that before the Cromwell of the Times can perform his promise, that two events, not very likely to happen, must positively take place? He must be restored to power in the first instance—and, in the second, the nation must consent to the increase of income, with which you have been flattered and deluded.

The public, Sir, are under no obligation to discharge those debts which your profusion has created; nor is it very probable that, considering the deplorable state of their finances, they will be easily prevailed upon to enlarge an income, already sufficient for all the purposes of your present establishment. These circumstances, perhaps, have been artfully concealed from you, as well as the impoverished state of the kingdom, which will not admit of wanton and unnecessary expenditures of the public money. A war, ruinous in every respect, idly begun, and more idly conducted, has oppressed the people with innumerable taxes, and rendered them almost incapable of sustaining any additional burthens. Yet the author of this unfortunate and disgraceful war, whom you have every reason to execrate, is honored with your confidence, and, destitute of pride and integrity, is content to act a servile and subordinate part to the man who has repeatedly menaced him with impeachment and the block. The calamities occasioned by the weak and corrupt administration of his Lordship, will terminate only with the empire; they will be felt to the latest period of our political existence. The millions squandered in obtaining majorities in both Houses of Parliament, will render a system of the strictest economy indispensable. And these truths, too obvious to be unknown to you, should at least have taught you to restrain your extravagance. The plea of youth affords no excuse. You stand in a different predicament from that of a private gentleman:—His person and property are answerable for the debts he contracts; bankruptcy and a prison terminate his career, and the nation feels no inconvenience from his follies; but you, Sir, have no property; your annual income as an annual donation, which may be withdrawn or withheld; and whatever Mr. Fox, and his wretched dependants, may assert to the contrary, the People of England will never submit to recompence those who injure and insult them.

But, supposing for a moment that this gentleman was reinstated, and supported by a Parliament totally at his devotion,—what security have you for the performance of his promise?—Are you so little read in his history and character, as not to know that he has already sacrificed every engagement, even the most sacred, to his ambition; and that his object is to reduce you and your august family to cyphers in the nation?—He calls himself the man of the people. At the next baptism he may, perhaps, assume the bolder name of Protector, and convince you of your errors, by possessing himself of Calton-house and removing you to the Tower. Happily, Sir, the nation has taken the alarm, and there is little danger either of his coming into power, or of his involving his country in all the horrors of a civil war. If the latter, however, contrary to appearances, should happen, it will not be an improper question to ask yourself, What part you will be permitted to take in the contest?

After having said thus much, it only remains for me to apologize for the liberty which I have presumed to take; a liberty which loyalty to my Sovereign, and affection for my country, have occasioned, and which the motives must justify.

NEPTUNE.

L O N D O N.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Wednesday, June 2.

The House went into a Committee of Supply, Mr. Gilbert in the Chair, when Mr. Rose moved, that the sum of one million and a half be raised by Exchequer Bills, be granted to his Majesty; also, that the sum of one million and a half be granted to make good the same; both which motions were unanimously agreed to.

The House being then resumed, went into a Committee, Mr. Gilbert in the Chair, when Mr. Pitt informed them, that he intended, before he sat down, to move for leave to bring in a bill for the more effectual prevention of smuggling, an object so much in contemplation of the House, and of every branch of the legislature, that it was unnecessary for him to state how essential it was to the very existence of the public revenue, that so dangerous and truly alarming an evil be effecttually restrained. He was very warm in his commendations on the exertions, schemes, and assiduity of the Committee to whom the consideration of the state of smuggling had been referred. With respect to the object he meant then to call the attention of the Committee to, it was that he might be permitted to bring in a bill to prevent smuggling in general; he did not wish to give it any other title, as he did not merely aim at a regulation in any one department; he only wished that in every branch of the revenue there might be sufficient powers and regulations to overturn the endeavours of those who wished to live upon the ruin of the public revenue. The great features of the bill he would briefly state, and the subjects it was intended more immediately to attach, leaving the consideration of the minor objects until the bill should be in a more mature stage. His first object was to extend the hovering laws to the four seas.—The second, to prevent ships from carrying arms without licence from the Admiralty.—The third, that smuggling vessels, when once captured, as they were solely adapted for that purpose, should never be returned.—The fourth, that ships of a certain description, upon the scale of smuggling, should be interdicted from being built.—The fifth, that certain goods, such as tea, &c. in smaller casks and packages than were allowed by law, should occasion the forfeit of both ship and cargo.—The sixth regarded clearances, in order to prevent ships clearing out with ballast, and afterwards going on the smuggling trade.

Mr. Pitt added various other observations and concluded with moving for leave to bring in a bill for the more effectual preventing of smuggling, which was granted, and Mr. Gilmer reported accordingly.

MONDAY, June 7.

Mr. Pitt rose to communicate a small piece of information to the House: He said that an Hon. Member whom he did not then see in his place, had moved an address to the King in the last Parliament, for the recall of Sir Elijah Impey. He did not know what proceeding the Hon. Member might think proper to institute relative to that learned Judge; all he had therefore to say was, that Sir Elijah had been recalled, and was at this moment in England.

Mr. Sturbridge reminded the House, that he was to have brought on the subject of a parliamentary reform either this day or to-morrow; but as he understood it to be the wish of the House that the proceedings on the Westminster election may not be interrupted, he rose to give notice, that he would postpone his intended motion till Thursday next.

A petition was presented complaining of the return of Lord Surry for the city of Hereford.

Mr. Eden observed, that as the noble Lord had been returned for three places, this petition ought to have a very early hearing, as until the merits of it should be tried, it would lock up three places: And as the House had given the preference in point of priority of hearing, to petitions against persons returned for two places, he presumed to reason for that priority would be found stronger in this than in any other cause of election in the new Parliament. Therefore he would move, that the above petition be taken into consideration on Friday the 18th inst.

Mr. Pitt said, he did not mean to oppose the motion, but merely to state that the petition would not keep three places locked up; for the rule by which members returned for two places are bound, is to make their election for which of them they will fit, in fourteen days after the meeting of Parliament, and which rule was always suspended when the seat for either place was attacked by petition, did not at all apply to the case of the noble Lord; for though, in equity, he must be allowed to retain one seat more besides that which is attacked, lest he should lose the latter, still he might renounce the third seat, and a new writ might issue for it: Thus the noble Lord might reserve either Arundel or Carlisle, while the seat for Hereford should be in dispute, and if he should secure his seat for Hereford, he then would be at liberty to make his election for that city, or for the other seat which he should have previously reserved.

Mr. Fox concurred in opinion with Mr. Pitt, and he observed that the noble Lord would not be called upon this day to declare whether he would fit for Carlisle or Arundel, but for which of the two places he would not fit; so that, after he should renounce one of them, he would still have two more, out of which to chuse which he would represent.

The Speaker said, this point was new, and could not be decided this day; but as to the motion for the hearing, it was carried unanimously.

A petition from Kirkwall was next presented by Mr. Sinclair, stating, that he took the wrong ground of complaint in his first petition, and that his complaint against Mr. Fox was for bribery and corruption by his friends.

Mr. Fox said, that as the reason operated against the Bedford petition, partly on the ground of its being a second petition, he hoped the matter, for the sake of consistency in the House, would remain as it was, and go to the Committee already appointed. Not, he said, that he had the least apprehensions on the bribery and corruption charge, for which there were just as much right of complaint as there was in the first petition.

Mr. Dundas thought otherwise, and so did Mr. Pitt. Mr. Fox gave up the point, and that which was denied on the Bedford was granted to the Kirkwall petition, at least in substance, though not exactly in form.

At length the order of the day was read for proceeding with the consideration of the several petitions in progress of hearing on the subject of the late Westminster election, and the Counsel were called to the bar.

Three witnesses were examined on the part of the High Bailiff, and one on the part of Mr. Fox. The questions put to them went principally with respect to the lists of bad votes for Mr. Fox, stated to have been delivered in to the High Bailiff and a Deputy by Sir Cecil Wray and his friends. During the examination Mr. Grojan, the Deputy Bailiff, Mr. Erskine asked the witness, "Whether information had been given to Mr. Fox or his Agents of such lists having been delivered in to the High Bailiff and himself, as he had stated?" Mr. Grojan in reply said, "Mr. Fox's Agents knew of them." Mr. Erskine upon this asked, "how the witness was assured, that the persons to whom he alluded, as knowing of the lists of bad votes, were Mr. Fox's Agents?" Mr. Grojan answered, "Be cause they appeared on the hustings as Mr. Fox's Friends," and was proceeding to add other reasons, when Mr. Erskine, as it were, with an irresistible impulse, interrupted the witness, by remarking that "if all the friends of Mr. Fox were to be deemed his Agents, almost every honest man in the Kingdom, out of that House, might be considered as Mr. Fox's Agents."

Upon this, Sir James Johnstone rose with great apparent warmth, and desired to know if the learned Counsel was to be permitted to abuse a witness under examination at their bar, with impunity? Counsel being ordered to withdraw, a warm debate, if it may be so called, of a few minutes continuance, ensued.

Mr. Rolle said, the fault lay with the Speaker. If he would exert himself properly in the chair, and do his duty, the House would proceed with much greater dispatch. When he gave his vote for seating the present Speaker a second time, he declared he did it under an idea, that the Speaker would keep that House in order. If this had been done, they would not have seen the Right Hon. Gentleman on the opposite side of the House, rise and speak in his own cause so often, contrary to their known rules and orders. He called upon the Chair to know whether it was not highly disorderly for a Counsel at the bar, or even for a Member of the House, to interrupt a witness in the middle of his answer to a question, that had been regularly put to him?

The Speaker said, it certainly was extremely disorderly, either for a Member or a Counsel, so to interrupt a witness; but in the present case, he really had not heard what had been said by the Counsel, or he should have told him his interruption was disorderly.

Counsel were then called in, and the examination proceeded, in which they were employed till half past ten o'clock, when Mr. Watson, Counsel for the High Bailiff, summed up the evidence for his client.

Mr. Erskine was then called to the bar, and heard on behalf of Mr. Fox for two hours and a half, when the House adjourned at half past two.

June 8. Lord Temple is talked of to succeed the Duke of Richmond as Master General of Ordnance. It is reported to have been offered to Lord Townshend, and refused.

The French have entered on a scheme of building such large ships, as obliges us to pursue the same method, to keep pace with them. Accordingly, no less than twelve three-deckers, from 90 to 110 guns, are now building in the several dock-yards.

Letters from Paris bring the following intelligence: All the letters lately arrived in the ships from the East-Indies, are filled with the most shocking accounts of the devastations upon the coast, by famine and an epidemical disease, not less rapid in its progress, or fatal in its effects, than the plague, which most deplorable of all human calamities it either produced, or at least was succeeded by. The Europeans escaped the famine, by having large stocks of rice and other provisions; but great numbers of them, as well as the natives, fell miserable sacrifices to the ravages of the pestilence; and Pondicherry, in particular, has sustained the most lamentable devastations. The famine was partly occasioned by monopolies, and partly by the immense quantities of all the articles of life being collected for the use of the numerous armies of the several powers at war; but still more by the devastations of the Maharratas, and of Tippoo Saib. Since the French army separated from him, Tippoo has constantly kept the field, and the divisions among the English afforded him opportunities of greatly annoying his adversaries. He has burnt and utterly destroyed both Arcate and Palicate; and having advanced to the very gates of Madras, has scarce left one stone unturned in the suburbs thereof, called the Black Town. This is one of the finest and most fertile countries in the world reduced to a situation the most miserable that imagination can conceive. Thanks to the ambition and the avarice of the Europeans.

B A L T I M O R E, August 6.

London newspapers, brought by Captain Parkinson, advise, that letters from Naples, of May 17, mention, that Mount Vesuvius had been, for several days, in a dreadful fermentation, and that tremendous torrents of fire had issued from the fissures of the mount. That a dreadful chasm opened in the earth, about the last of March, at the foot of the Apennine Mountains (in the Republic of Lucca) in which 50 houses were, in an instant, swallowed up; but that the inhabitants, 300 in number, had previously retired to a large plain, with such effects as they could collect amidst their horror and amazement. That great preparations were making at Carthage, and other parts of Old Spain, for a second bombardment of Algiers. That the affair of Don Solano had been terminated in a favorable manner for that Lieutenant-General of the naval department, his conduct having been judged irreproachable. That the dispute between the English and Dutch, on the coast of Malabar, had been amicably settled. That hostilities had actually commenced in India, between the Portuguese and certain country powers. That letters from Venice assert, that the Porte had lost all its influence in the distant provinces. That Egypt and Persia had, it was said, thrown off all dependence on the Grand Seigneur, and had made themselves masters of several principal fortresses belonging to that Monarch; and that Bussara and Bagdad were both in the hands of the Persians. That the King of Denmark had forbidden all emigrations from his dominions, under the most rigorous penalties. That the Emperor of Germany looks at this time to the recovery of Lorraine and Alsatia, the possessions of his ancestors; and from the Dutch requires Maestricht and 24 parishes in its neighbourhood; that in these enterprises he expects to be assisted by the Emperor of Russia; but that according to the last news, the Prince of Nassau Wilbourg had orders to repair to Maestricht with two regiments, and to repel force by force. That his Britannic Majesty had appointed Sir James Harris his Ambassador to the States General. That the celebrated Duc de Choiseul was expected shortly to set out from France for the Court of England, for the purpose of negotiating a commercial treaty. That several personages of distinction were soon to proceed from France to America, in order to settle some important articles with the Congress, with regard to trade. That the commerce of the West-India islands with the United States of America was shortly to undergo a parliamentary investigation, in England. That the British House of Commons had voted 26000 seamen, including 4400 marines, to be employed for the service of the current year. That Mr. Pitt, the Premier of Great-Britain, had expressed his approbation of a parliamentary reform in Great-Britain and Ireland, and had promised his assistance in any just and temperate measures, to effect so desirable and important an object. That the American trade-bill had been read, on the 3d of June, in the British House of Commons, and passed. That the Spaniards, it was reported, had offered to the British government, East and West-Florida, Porto-Rico, and three millions of dollars, in exchange for Gibraltar. That Mr. Morris's cause, to establish his matrimonial contract with Miss Harford, the daughter of the late Lord Baltimore, had been determined, the Court having given final judgment "that both marriages were void—that Miss Harford, falsely in the libel called Morris, was at full liberty to marry again, and that Mr. Morris was "condemned in full costs."

N E W - Y O R K, August 5.

During the late election squabbles for Westminster, the following made its appearance, shewing the corruptness and treachery of the leaders of that seditious, dissipated nation, from which we were so lately, and so happily freed:

Q U E R I E S to the Late MAN of the PEOPLE.

WERE you not intimately connected with the unfortunate TYRRE (who was executed at Portsmouth for conveying intelligence to the Enemies of this Country) and in Company with him the greatest Part of the Day and Night, previous to his being apprehended?

DID you not agree with a Man who stands on the Records of the Court of King's Bench, in several Instances, as the Confederate of the said TYRRE, to bring him into Parliament for the sum of £2000?

DID you not, Judas like, receive that Sum, £2000, the Price of your Country's Blood?

WHEN the Editors of ----- discovered that you meant to sell them to such a Character (out of your great Respect to an equitable representation, and the dignity of the House of Commons—your perfect Bias) did they not alike virtuously reprobate you? Presumption?

DID not Mr. TYRRE's Partner oblige you to refund the £2000, and also a considerable Sum for Expenses which you had involved him in, under the Pretence of bringing him into Parliament.

DID you not know that the £2000 paid you was the property of TYRRE?

WHO were the Two Great Men at that Time in Opposition alluded to in TYRRE's Letter, wrote by Himself the night previous to his Execution, as having amused him to the last Moment with an Assurance of Pardon, if he would persevere in Secrecy?

PHILADELPHIA, August 11.

His Excellency the President and the Honorable the Supreme Executive Council were pleased, by ballot, unanimously to re-appoint the Honorable Thomas McKean, Esq; L. L. D. Chief Justice of this State, on the twenty-ninth day of last month, and he was sworn in the same day by his Excellency in Council. And on Monday last, they, by ballot, unanimously re-appointed the Honorable William Augustus Allen, Second Justice of the Supreme Court of this State.

On Wednesday last arrived at New-York his Most Christian Majesty's packet le Courier de l'Europe, Captain Juba, in 35 days from l'Orient, with whom came passengers, the Marquis de la Fayette, Colonel Harmar, and Chevalier Caraman, Captain of dragoons in the army of France.

Colonel Harmar arrived in this city on Friday evening, and brings duplicates of dispatches already received, being the ratification of the definitive treaty by the court of Great Britain, &c.

Monday last the Marquis de la Fayette arrived here from New-York. He was met at some distance from town by the city troop of horse, a number of officers of the militia, and other respectable inhabitants, who had the pleasure of attending him some miles, and escorting him into the city. At the Coffee-house a crowd of people waited for the pleasure of seeing him, and to pay a small tribute to his merits; this compliment was returned by the patriotic nobleman, who seemed highly pleased at once more receiving those affectionate marks of regard from those whose cause he had long since advocated, and by his exertions contributed not a little to the establishment of their liberties.

The Tankerville British packet, McDonough, from Falmouth; New-York, Smith, from Amherdam; Anna Maria, Holm, from Cadiz; Liberty, Prince, from Cayenne; and Fanny, Newel, from Guadeloupe, are arrived at New-York.

The brig Mary, Captain Heartwell, from this port, bound to Jamaica, about the middle of June ran on a rock near Turks-Island, and both vessel and cargo are lost.

The ship Lady Ann, Captain Kelly, from this port for the Havana, ran ashore near her destined port, and was lost, but part of the cargo saved.

The Sally, Hunter, from London, and Sophia Magdalena, Anchor, from Dublin, are arrived at Baltimore.

The Kitty, Bryon, from London, is arrived at Annapolis. The Hero, Parkinson, with passengers from Belfast, and Eleanor, Richards, from Nevis, are arrived at Baltimore.

A bill is brought into the house of assembly for raising 250 men, from the militia of this state, to serve twelve months, subject to the rules and regulations of the late army of the United States. There are to be in part of 700 non-commissioned officers and privates, which Congress have deemed necessary to garrison the posts on the northwestern frontiers, and for guarding the public stores.

The general assembly of Virginia have voted a statue of our late most worthy Commander in Chief, General Washington. In consequence of which his Excellency Governor Harrison has written to Mr. Peale, of this city, requesting him to draw a full length picture of the General immediately, to be shipped for France, where the work is to be executed under the care of the Honorable Thomas Jefferson, Esquire.

Saturday last departed this life, Mr. WILLIAM MILLER, merchant, of this city.

"The following is inserted by particular desire.

"His Most Christian Majesty, willing to promote a literary as well as a political connection with the United States, hath been pleased to present to the University of Pennsylvania, a valuable and elegant collection of books in philosophy, history, arts, &c. by the most eminent French authors and of the most approved editions, amounting to more than one hundred volumes; these have been respectfully received by the Board of Trustees, and are now lodged in the Library of the University, where it is hoped they will answer his Majesty's good intention, by increasing the avenues to knowledge, and encouraging the study of the French language in America."

Messieurs Boind and Gaillard having been pleased, in their paper of the 3d instant, to mention the circumstance noticed in the above paragraph with a malicious sneer, equally unprovoked and misapplied, a member of the Board of Trustees thought proper to place this article of intelligence in the foregoing form, which being translated into the French language was presented to Mr. Boind for publication. This, however, Mr. Boind refused to do, alledging that his paper was not intended for this country, but for France; that this paragraph contradicted what he had said in his Courier of the 3d, and if he should insert it now, it might be thought that he had been intimidated by the French Minister, and compelled to publish against his will and judgment; and lastly, that his paper was a paper of truth, and the article offered was not true, the books being in his opinion neither valuable nor elegant. Astonished at this refusal, and much more so at the absurd reasons of Mr. Boind, the author demanded the publication of the article, not as a matter of favor, but of right, offering to leave his name and pay for the printing. This did not satisfy the editor of the Courier de l'Amerique, he insisted that the paragraph should be announced as coming from the Board of Trustees, or that the author should subscribe his name to it. Both these requisitions were declined; the first, because only the consent, and not the authority of the Board had been obtained for such a publication; and the second, because the paragraph in its present form would not with propriety admit of such a signature. Whereupon Mr. Boind absolutely refused to give it a place in his paper.

The foregoing narrative seems to give some insight into the views of Messrs. Boind and Gaillard in the publication of the Courier de l'Amerique, which they say is not designed for this country, but for France. Their paper of the 6th instant is a further manifestation of those views, and it is more than probable, that an attention to their future publications will discover a direct tendency to one important object.

QUERIES.

1st. Could the views of our enemies be better served, as things now stand, than by introducing persons on whom they can depend, to set up pretexts in each of the United States, who might, by reviving old prejudices and insinuating new ones, secretly undermine the foundations of our peace and political interest?

2d. Whatever unrestrained liberties may be allowed to the press of our own citizens, whose allegiance to government and zeal for the independence of these United States cannot be doubted, does not common prudence dictate that a jealous eye ought to be kept upon strangers publishing Couriers and Gazettes amongst us, as these afford the most direct access to the minds of the people at large?

3d. Could those, who envy the freedom we enjoy, contrive any means for subverting our peace and happiness more effectual, than by endeavouring to prejudice us against our friends, or to prejudice our friends against us.

State Lottery-Office, July 13, 1784.

WHEN the Managers of the Lottery published the scheme, they "expected that the first class would be drawn in the first week in June;" and this expectation was grounded upon the desire which apparently prevailed among the public in general to become adventurers; but as the sale of tickets has not been so rapid as was hoped, owing as is supposed to the scarcity of cash; the drawing has necessarily been delayed. The Managers wish to proceed, as they are persuaded that the tickets of the first class being sold and the drawing thereof finished, the subsequent classes would be filled in less time than has already elapsed since the lottery was set on foot; they therefore recommend it to such as are determined to become adventurers to apply speedily for tickets, which is the only means to enable the Managers to proceed to the drawing, as they are not empowered by the law to draw any tickets at the risque of the State.

He has been hired with farmers in different parts of Chester county, and lived two years with Mr. Thomas Watson, near Newark, in New-Castle county; He is an artful fellow, can play on the fife, and may probably change his name, and pass for a freeman, as he did once before on a like occasion.
